Henry was born in Charlotte, North Carolina, in 1960. He began playing guitar at an early age, and by the time he was 15, he was playing in local clubs. In 1979, he moved to New York City, where he began his career as a singer-songwriter.

Henry's early albums were influenced by folk and blues music. However, he soon began to experiment with different genres, and his music became more eclectic.

In the 1990s, Henry began to produce albums for other artists, including Solomon Burke, Emmylou Harris, and Bonnie Raitt. He also wrote songs for other artists, including Aaron Neville, Mavis Staples, and Allen Toussaint.

In 2001, Henry released his album Scar, which was a critical and commercial success. The album featured guest appearances from Emmylou Harris, Willie Nelson, and Bruce Springsteen.

Henry has continued to release critically acclaimed albums throughout his career. His latest album, The Gospel According to Water, was released in 2018.

Henry is a gifted singer-songwriter, producer, and author. His music is eclectic and defies easy categorization. He is a true American original.

Henry's Early Life and Influences

Joe Henry was born in Charlotte, North Carolina, in 1960. His father was a doctor, and his mother was a nurse. Henry began playing guitar at an early age, and by the time he was 15, he was playing in local clubs.

Henry's early musical influences included Bob Dylan, Woody Guthrie, and John Prine. He was also influenced by the blues music of Mississippi John Hurt and Son House.

In 1979, Henry moved to New York City, where he began his career as a singer-songwriter. He released his debut album, Talk of Heaven, in 1986.

Henry's Early Albums

Henry's early albums were influenced by folk and blues music. His debut album, Talk of Heaven, featured simple, acoustic arrangements and introspective lyrics.

Henry's second album, Murder of Crows, was released in 1989. The album was more experimental than his debut, and it featured a wider range of musical influences, including rock, jazz, and country.

Henry's third album, Short Man's Room, was released in 1992. The album was a critical and commercial success, and it helped to establish Henry as one of the leading singer-songwriters of his generation.

Henry's Production Work

In the 1990s, Henry began to produce albums for other artists, including Solomon Burke, Emmylou Harris, and Bonnie Raitt. He also wrote songs for other artists, including Aaron Neville, Mavis Staples, and Allen Toussaint.

Henry's production work is characterized by its attention to detail and its ability to capture the essence of an artist's sound.

Henry has produced some of the most critically acclaimed albums of the past 20 years, including Solomon Burke's Don't Give Up on Me, Emmylou Harris's Red Dirt Girl, and Bonnie Raitt's Silver Lining.

Henry's Recent Work

Henry has continued to release critically acclaimed albums throughout his career. His latest album, The Gospel According to Water, was released in 2018.

The Gospel According to Water is a departure from Henry's previous work. The album is more subdued and reflective, and it features a wider range of musical influences, including gospel, folk, and classical.

The Gospel According to Water has been praised by critics for its beauty and its emotional depth.

Joe Henry is a gifted singer-songwriter, producer, and author. His music is eclectic and defies easy categorization. He is a true American original.
