

Shakespeare in Ravenna, 1615: David Weston and the Birth of the European Bard

In 1615, a young English actor named David Weston embarked on a journey that would forever change the course of European theater. Weston traveled to the Italian city of Ravenna, where he encountered a group of actors who were performing a play by William Shakespeare. Weston was so impressed by the play and the actors that he decided to stay in Ravenna and learn more about Shakespeare's work.

Over the next few years, Weston became one of the leading interpreters of Shakespeare's plays in Europe. He toured extensively throughout Italy and France, and his performances helped to spread Shakespeare's work to a wider audience. Weston also translated some of Shakespeare's plays into Italian, making them accessible to a new generation of readers.
